Secretary

I will speak to Denzil this morning and let him know that we will be in a position to give him a definitive response this afternoon. All we should offer him is a 15minute telephone interview and it will probably have to be next week. I will stress that the issue has been a very busy diary.

I will be at a meeting in Deirdre kenny's office at 2.00pm but if the Minister is happy to proceed I can leave the meeting and ring Denzil again.

Colm,

I am happy to go with this advice, if the Minister is also content. I will have an opportunity to speak to her at 2pm on Monday. Would this fit your timescale for contact with McDaniel?

I would, incidentally, not want to appear forced into this by his pressure, so we would need to make it clear that we are carving something out from a very busy diary and there should be no messing about on it.
